Copper Canyon

Copper Canyon is located in northern Mexico in the Sierra Madre Mountains, a vast scenic area of pine-forested mountains cleaved by huge, deep canyons. The canyon complex known as the “Barranca del Cobre,” or Copper Canyon, is four times larger than Arizona’s Grand Canyon and almost 300 feet deeper.

This is the homeland of the Tarahumara Indians, who in spite of encroaching civilization, have managed to preserve their ancient traditional lifestyle, living in caves and simple shelters while practicing subsistence farming. They are considered to be the world’s greatest long-distance runners, racing up and down the vast area of canyons for transportation and sport.

The Chihuahua al Pacifico Railroad, which traverses the area, took nearly one hundred years to build. It passes through 86 tunnels and crosses 37 bridges as it climbs almost 8000 feet into the rugged Sierra Madres. It has been called one of the most spectacular train rides in the Western Hemisphere.

For more than two decades we have been operating the very best trips through Copper Canyon. Our guides are known throughout the area for their work with the Tarahumara Indians, and we have become a major source of information on this remote area of Mexico.

Copper Canyon Fully Escorted Tours

These fully escorted tours are led by experienced bilingual American guides, who enjoy sharing their extensive knowledge of the area with our guests. The groups are limited to a maximum of 16 persons. They include airfare from Los Angeles, Phoenix or El Paso and range in length from 7 to 14 days.

7-day Classic Tour

This trip is for just about anybody. For more than two decades we have shared this adventure with thousands of people of all ages.

1st Day: We fly to the city of Los Mochis, then transfer to the small colonial city of El Fuerte, where we spend the night and begin our Copper Canyon adventure.

2nd Day: In the morning we board the first-class Copper Canyon train and travel up into the Sierra Madre Mountains, passing through 86 tunnels and crossing 37 bridges. This is one of the most spectacular train rides in the Western Hemisphere. After lunch on the train, we arrive at Divisadero and stay at a picturesque lodge located right on the edge of the canyon. Here we make our first contacts with the cave-dwelling Tarahumara Indians. In the afternoon we hike along the canyon rim for magnificent views. Dinner is at the lodge's dining room, with its majestic view of the canyon.

3rd Day: After breakfast we hike to Tarahumara caves and spectacular canyon views. Usually our guides can make arrangements with the Indians to put on demonstrations of their famous foot races and folk dances. In the afternoon we board the train for the ride to Creel, a lumber town high in the Sierra Madre Mountains, where we spend the next two nights.

4th Day: We explore the area surrounding Creel—an old Jesuit Mission, a Tarahumara cave dwelling and strange rock formations—and enjoy a picnic lunch at Lake Arereco. We also have the opportunity to hike to Cusarare Falls.

5th Day: Traveling to the city of Chihuahua, we stop at a Mennonite settlement for a homemade lunch, arriving in the afternoon at our deluxe hotel. The rest of the day is free to explore the city and discover its fine restaurants.

6th Day: We tour the city of Chihuahua—the State Capital with its murals, the State Museum and the home of Pancho Villa. The afternoon is free for shopping, relaxing and wandering. This evening we enjoy our traditional farewell banquet.

7th Day: We travel by van to Ciudad Juarez, then fly home from El Paso, sad to leave but returning home with wonderful memories of this remote area and the unique people who make it their home.

What's included: These trips are fully escorted by our experienced bilingual guides. The price includes transportation and accommodations: one night in El Fuerte, one night in Divisadero, two nights in Creel and two nights in Chihuahua; excursions, tips and most meals. Round-trip airfare from Los Angeles, Phoenix or El Paso is also included. Check with us for discounted air rates from other U.S. and Canadian cities.

14-day Everything Tour

We've extended our 11-day Ultimate Tour to allow more time for exploring and relaxing. An additional day has been added to our visits to the towns of El Fuerte, Noritari and Chihuahua.

Since everything in Mexico is changeable, we cannot give a firm, set itinerary, but a typical itinerary is as follows:

1st Day: We fly to the city of Los Mochis, then travel to the colonial city of El Fuerte, where we spend the next two nights.

2nd Day: Today we tour a Mayo Indian village, then have the rest of the day free to wander and explore El Fuerte.

3rd Day: We board the first-class Copper Canyon train for one of the most spectacular train rides in the Western Hemisphere. Leaving the train at Bahuichivo station, we drive to the Paraiso del Oso Lodge (Paradise of the Bear), located in a beautiful valley a few miles from the little village of Cerocahui.

4th Day: This morning we travel to the bottom of the canyon and the town of Urique. There is plenty of time to explore the village before returning to the Paraiso del Oso Lodge.

5th Day: We board the train for the short ride to Divisadero, where we stay at a picturesque hotel located right on the edge of the canyon. In the afternoon we hike along the canyon rim for magnificent views.

6th Day: After breakfast we hike to the Tarahumara caves and even more spectacular views of the canyon. This afternoon we board the train for Creel, a lumber town high in the Sierra Madre Mountains, where we spend the next two nights.

7th Day: We spend the day exploring the area surrounding Creel—an old Jesuit Mission, a Tarahumara cave dwelling and strange rock formations. We also enjoy an optional hike to Cusarare Falls and a picnic lunch at Lake Arereco.

8th Day: Today we travel to the little town of Batopilas, passing through mountains and valleys on our way down the winding dirt road that leads to the bottom of the canyon. For the next two nights we stay in a charming little Mexican hotel in this village where time seems to have stopped in the nineteenth century.

9th Day: We hike or ride, at our option, to the "Lost Cathedral" of Satevo and explore Batopilas and the surrounding area.

10th Day: This morning we travel back up the canyon and continue into a forested area just outside of San Juanito. For the next two nights we stay at Norítari in cozy log cabins.

11th Day: Today we visit the famous Basaseachic Waterfall. This single drop waterfall is the second highest in Mexico and ranks 29th in the world.

12th Day: Traveling to the city of Chihuahua, we stop at a Mennonite settlement for a homemade lunch, then arrive in the afternoon at our deluxe hotel and have the rest of the day free to explore the city and discover its fine restaurants.

13th Day: We tour the city of Chihuahua—the State Capital, the Spanish aqueduct, the State Museum, the home of Pancho Villa and the cathedral. We have the afternoon free to shop, relax and wander, and in the evening we enjoy our traditional farewell banquet.

14th Day: We travel by van from Chihuahua to Ciudad Juarez, then fly home from El Paso, sad to leave but returning home with wonderful memories of this remote area of Mexico and the unique people who make it their home.

What's included: These trips are fully escorted by our experienced bilingual guides. The price includes transportation, accommodations, excursions, tips and most meals. People Love Our Copper Canyon Adventures:

“We had a great time on the Copper Canyon trip. It was a wonderful trip. Everything went as scheduled and the plans you made for us were great. We took the van to Batopilas and it was well worth the ride. Very exciting and not one I would have wanted to miss. El Fuerte is a particularly nice town. We were invited to a fiesta which was a birthday celebration for some descendants of the original founders and there were relatives brought in by bus from all over Mexico. A really fun evening—dancing horses, free beer and food and lots of music. Another highlight was our stay at Divisadero. A beautiful facility, wonderful service, outstanding scenery. It was so peaceful that it was hard to leave. Thanks for your good planning efforts.”

Donna and Russ Redick

“It was really a spectacular journey. I couldn’t help but feel that somehow Copper Canyon is the very heart and soul of Mexico.”

Carolyn Kreisman

“I had a wonderful time and I appreciated the thoughtfulness that obviously went into structuring the trip. I have recommended your company to many people and will continue to do so. It was a very good experience; thanks for making my vacation so enjoyable!”

Alison Miner

“One cannot imagine how beautiful and impressive the Copper Canyon is until you see it from the top and from below and meet some of the Indian people.”

John and Jane Rolfes

“The guide was fabulous—the best we have ever had. The close up meeting of people and history/background information of the entire area shared by the guide was excellent.”

Glenn Storck

“It was a beautiful trip—everything was perfect. Such a country and good new friends. Here is to more of it.”

A Little About the Area

COPPER CANYON: Copper Canyon, also called “Barranca del Cobre,” is actually a series of large, interconnected canyons at the southernmost end of the Rocky Mountains. These canyons were carved by a series of rivers from volcanic rock 1000 to 1500 feet thick, which was laid down around 30 million years ago, and cover a vast area almost four times larger and 280 feet deeper than Arizona’s Grand Canyon. Unlike the Grand Canyon, which is relatively unpopulated, Copper Canyon is home to a large population of Tarahumara Indians, who have lived in the area for thousands of years.

LOS MOCHIS: Named by the Mochicha Indians as “Place of the Land Turtles,” today Los Mochis is the agricultural capital of Sinaloa State. Los Mochis was originally developed by a group of Americans in an attempt to create a socialist utopia that would rival San Francisco as a major seaport. Although the colony never succeeded, the completion of the Chihuahua al Pacifico Railway helped bring prosperity and opportunity to this coastal city. Nearby Topolobampo Bay is a shrimp and fishing port.

EL FUERTE: A small colonial town with cobblestone streets located about 50 miles east of Los Mochis, El Fuerte, “The Fort,” was founded in 1564 by Spanish Conquistador Don Francisco de Ibarra as a military post. For three hundred years it served as a trading post for gold and silver miners.

CEROCAHUI: A small, peaceful farming village of about 600 residents, Cerocahui is located at an altitude of 5000 feet. The valley is dotted with apple and peach orchards and is surrounded by the Sierra Madres. A narrow dirt road leads from Cerocahui down to the village of Urique in the bottom of the Urique Canyon.

URIQUE: A small village at the bottom of the canyon, Urique was founded in 1690. It remained isolated until it was connected by dirt road to Cerocahui in 1975. Gold mining is still conducted there on a small scale, and the town serves as a county seat and economic center for this rugged and remote section of the mountains.

EL DIVISADERO: “The View Point.” At an altitude of nearly 8,000 feet, this magnificent vista point overlooks a whole series of intertwined barrancas (canyons) with rivers deep in their bottoms. This is also the point where most visitors first encounter the remote and cave-dwelling Tarahumara Indians. El Divisadero provides many photo opportunities and short hikes to local caves, a Tarahumara school, a balancing rock and several dramatic viewpoints.

CREEL: Situated at an altitude of approximately 7,200 feet, Creel is a small lumber town located in the high Sierras close to Copper Canyon. At one point the terminus of the Chihuahua al Pacifico rail line, Creel is now the midway stopping and departure point for several Indian villages in the area. From Creel, many Tarahumara caves can be visited along with beautiful lakes, waterfalls, pine forests and strange rock formations.

BATOPILAS: Located at the bottom of the deepest canyon, Batopilas is now a sleepy little village, but in the 19th century it was one of the richest silver mining areas in the world. A visit to Batopilas is a step back in time. Cowboys ride their horses down its dirt streets while Indians pack their burros with supplies for their remote villages. On the outskirts of the town are the ruins of a Gothic adobe mansion built in 1880 by an American entrepreneur. The surrounding hills are still riddled with abandoned mine shafts. Nearby lie many remote Tarahumara villages and a 400-year-old Jesuit mission. The mission, recently restored, is known as the “Lost Cathedral” of Satevo because over the course of time all records of the cathedral were lost. The climate is semitropical, and it is best visited during the winter time.

CUAUHTEMOC: A modern Mexican city, Cuauhtemoc lies on route to the state capital of Chihuahua. Named after the mighty Aztec leader, Cuauhtemoc is now the home of several thousand Mennonites who came to the area shortly after the Mexican Revolution to farm lands that were formerly owned by William Randolph Hearst. The Mennonites live in a series of numbered “campos” just outside of the city and still preserve their traditional pious lifestyle. They are very prosperous farmers and market their crops throughout Mexico along with their famous cheese.

CHIHUAHUA CITY: Capital of the state of Chihuahua, this large Mexican city is one of the most important cities in Northern Mexico. During both the War for Independence and the Mexican Revolution, Chihuahua was an important center of activity. Father Miguel Hidalgo, champion of Mexico’s Independence, was executed in what now serves as the government palace. This was also the headquarters for famous leaders such as Benito Juarez and the Revolution’s controversial hero, Pancho Villa. Here, visits can be made to several interesting sites, including the Chihuahua State Museum, the home of Pancho Villa and the Museum of the Revolution, the old aqueduct and the Chihuahua Cathedral, which took one hundred years to complete.
